Good day!

I am writing this letter to provide impressions about the students of Tokyo University of Technology who studied in our online English classes at Lasallian Language Center. As a teacher, I am amazed at how diligent the students are. It is remarkable to see their willingness to learn and improve.

I met several students during the class. During the first batch, I met K [REDACTED], M [REDACTED], A [REDACTED] and S [REDACTED]. They were committed in all their classes. Every time I would have my class with them, they were well-prepared. Also, one notable thing during the class was that they would always try to give answers when the teachers asked them. They were also inquisitive and would ask questions during the class.

For the second batch of students, I met Y [REDACTED], H [REDACTED] and M [REDACTED]. These students really showed passion in learning. Aside from being participative in the class discussions, they would always submit their outputs on time and with correct answers. What impressed me the most was when they asked for the file we used during the class. These files are different from the books that we sent them before the start of the term. These files are word files/documents that we use when we do screen sharing. I heard that they used it as notes and used it every time they need to review.

Teaching the students from Tokyo University of Technology is a new experience for all of us here in the center. It is inspiring to see students with a great passion for learning and an utmost respect for teachers. It has motivated us to be better and continue to improve ourselves. Learning something does not only need a good teacher, it also needs a good student. Unity and collaboration are necessary for a better outcome.
